How do you build a Board able and willing to raise money?

If you have tried these approaches...

- had prominent individuals lend their names for your letterhead
 - recruited new “grass roots worker bees” to the Board
 - gotten a “star” or celebrity involved with your Board
 - held a big special event to get maximum publicity
 - established a support group to do the fundraising
- set up an “advisory board”

...only to find they don’t work, call us. Because boards that are willing and able to give and get don’t just happen. They are created by skilled and seasoned fundraising professionals who use time-tested principles and astute development strategies.

The Mark Randall Company specializes in helping executive and development staff build stronger boards—capable of giving and getting.

If your board members provide little or no financial support or you have been unable to recruit people of means to serve on your board...

We find talking informally about your particular situation and how we might apply our skills and experience to help you further your efforts is a good way to begin a relationship.

There is no obligation.
